

George D. Herr, M. E.
Strasburg, Pa.

"Where he falls short is Nature's fault alone"

George D. Herr was born in Strasburg, Pa., January 22, 1891. His early life was spent on the farm and he would have been there yet, but one day Herr, Sr., and "Shorty" had an altercation and they went to the mat, where "Shorty" made the pater take the count. The size of the farm was immediately increased, but it was too small an arena for Georgie. His egotism as a wrestler grew an enormous biceps, for even then he dreamed dreams and had visions of "throwing" the whole Navy.

Franklin and Marshall Academy, Lancaster, prepared him for Lehigh and was glad to send him on with the remark that he was little, but tough and fit. After he was established here and his real disposition known, every time he went after a College honor it was thrown at him, because everyone was afraid to say him nay. In the words of the classics, Herr is "the finest scrapper of us all."
